

THE MATRIX DECODED

There aren't many sure things when it comes to entertainment. The closest thing I can think of that's a guaranteed blast is a Prince show although these days you'll have to deal with the Minneapolis Genius as a brainwashed Jehovah's Witness complete with the no cursing, no flamboyant clothes, no sex before marriage attitude. If you're lucky he'll even preach to you and reveal which Bible is the best to read and why! This is what it sounds like, When his Fans Cry.

I rarely go to the movies. I better be guaranteed some Boom-Smacka-Boomin' flick if I'm gonna slap down 11 bones and have to deal with a schmuck whose knees continuously knock the back of my seat. I thought the Matrix sequel could not miss. Guaranteed blast, no question. Free my mind, my wallet and the small of my back; I'm ready. How could they fuck this up? No way does this go the route of Beverly Hills Cop II or The Godfather Part III. I truly wanted to believe in the Matrix trilogy as being a revolutionary subversive creation from the minds of two brilliant brothers. I wanted to believe that two visionaries had found a way to use the system to beat the system; almost tricking people into waking up. I love art that supports true freedom and has the balls to question authority while inspiring inner strength. The first flick had me convinced. A man breaks free of the illusion that he is free and joins a revolution to overthrow the lie; to conquer the machinistic regime. In freeing himself he connects to a wealth of inner power that he always had. He is ultimately saved by love. The movie ends with the messianic figure serving notice to the Matrix overlords. I'm down says the Verbal Warrior. Call me Zeo!

Since the first film some serious shit has gone down in our world and I was kinda hoping that the sequel would continue on the same path of revolt and upliftment. I was thinking how huge a movie this was going to be and how amazing it would be if in these times it would inspire us to replace the fear and warmongering with hope. A hope that despite all this chaos and disorder around us, we have the will to prevail. Honestly, I was looking to be inspired once again the same way I was inspired by the first movie.

After the rush of exhilaration wore off from the special effects and fight scenes I finally realized what I had seen. When it hit me I got really sick to my stomach. This movie was like eating White Castle burgers. They taste so good while you're inhaling them but damn do they wreak havoc with your bowels a couple of hours later.

This may seem insignificant to almost all of you but the first moment that my mouth dropped was when the Oracle said that in order to get access to the keymaster they must go through the Merovingian. Now, this is not just a random name and the Wachowski's or whoever put this name in must have known the significance of it. Merovingian is the name of a bloodline that's descended from Charlemagne. All of the royal families of Europe are related to this bloodline. The Merovingians fought in the Trojan War and founded Paris in the sixth century, naming it after Prince Paris, the son of King Priam of Troy. The founders of the Mormon religion are from this bloodline and a secret society was founded by them called the Priory of Sion that was based in France as well. Sion/Zion both relate to Sun worship religions and the Merovingians claim to be descendants of Jesus the “Sun” of GOD. So what? A royal bloodline is the name of a character, big deal. Well, it’s like when hip hop headz give shout outs in their raps. You won’t see Jay Z giving a big up to the Windsors and the Masons. 50 Cent ain’t saying “Annunaki Hybrids show me Luv in the Club!” This character is a big up to those in the know.

Real quickly, what the hell was that cake/orgasm moment in the restaurant about? Okay, u can make a chick cum from eating some expensive pastry. I can make a chick cum with food stuffs also, big deal! At least she shoulda had one of those When Harry Met Sally orgasms. All she did was excuse herself. No Ay Papi? No Herbal Essence episode complete with the wailing of Yes Yes Yes? Sheesh. What a let down. Lemme at her.

Almost every character in this film had no emotion. Everyone was like Agent Smith except the Oracle and she was a program! Morpheus’ speech patterns devolved into a steady drone and Keanu wasn’t even allowed to be charming which he can be, just robotic which he does sickeningly well. The passion that empowered the rebels in the first movie was replaced with an eerie robotic energy. Zion was a hellhole. I understand that it’s supposed to be devoid of the illusion of luxury that the real world has but if this world had been in existence for 250 years I think there would have been some beauty in it, regardless of the condition of fear. Humanity brings art and light to any situation of darkness and Zion should have reflected that. Instead we get a discourse of how it runs on machines and how we should trust them for without them we wouldn’t survive. So what? Well, one of the mainpoints I’m trying to convey is that the inspirational tone of the first movie was constantly being undermined in an overt and submlinal manner in the second. Yes, I grant you it could be a set-up for the third one but the ideals were severely ripped apart and I don’t think it was done by accident.

Then we had the moment of truth so to speak. Neo meets the Architect of the Matrix. Aite, here we go. I braced myself and kept repeating to keep an open mind during this scene. It was this scene in particular that had me ready to hurl. First of all we get the cookie cutter GOD-like character complete with the white skin and white beard. He looked like Sauron from Lord of the Rings without the Hippie hair. I followed and understood everything he said and he did say quite a bit. Obviously I couldn’t possible process every line especially since he was delivering them so fast in a monotonous way. The main gist of what he revealed is that every revolutionary act against the Matrix has not only been predicted but was allowed to happen so that the program could be enhanced and saved for the people buying into the illusion. We own you, we always have owned you and every act that you take that you think is of your own free will; we knew it was coming. We even can predict what choice you will make when we offer it to you. Give up, resistance is futile. There really is no recourse to a reality such as the one described by great whitey and no matter what they concoct for the final chapter the damage is already done as far as I’m concerned.

Why get worked up over a movie? Because this will be seen by millions of people and the impact it can have subconsciously could be enormous. Why wake up from the lie? Don't waste your time. Even worse than that is the subliminal programming of it being fashionable to be plugged in all of the time which ties in to the whole eventual micro-chipping agenda that's slowly being paraded out to the masses. Look, the truth is stranger than fiction and this film like so many Hollywood productions presents the truth as fiction. Walk up to your average shmo on the street and tell him that the themes of this movie are actually real and they'll laugh at you for believing a fairy-tale, "It's just a movie buddy, relax".

Just a movie huh? When you look at the world around you you'll notice that our system of Corporate Government and Capitalist Socialism is very similar to this sci-fi fantasy. We have been given our own pod complete with a number, illusionary benefits and false hopes for security. We are urged and prodded to escape our reality through synthetic means and mindless images. Those who have taken the blue pill and have supposedly woken up are beaten back and silenced for fear of disturbing and scaring the other happy drones. Agent Smith's line at the end of the first movie says it all: "Have you ever stood and stared at it? Marveled at its beauty; its genius? Billions of people, just living out their lives – oblivious".

Evidence of America's collective Matrix mentality can be pointed to in their overall objection of being presented with graphic images depicting wounded soldiers or dead Iraqi civilians in our recent illegal war. Those who wanted the reality of war shown were called unpatriotic and were judged to be unsupportive of our troops. This grand state of denial that most Americans live in allows this cruelty to not only continue but be forgiven even when their lies blow up in their faces i.e. answer our questions about 9/11; where are the WMD's? Any truth seeker attempting to offer them a blue pill is considered a traitor to their country.

Even the scientific elements of this fairytale are not too far away from becoming a part of our illusionary reality. The Pentagon has initiated a project called LifeLog that takes their Total Information Awareness nonsense to a whole other level of control. This is not a joke, this is real and is being formulated as I write this:

"The embryonic LifeLog program would dump everything an individual does into a giant database: every e-mail sent or received, every picture taken, every Web page surfed, every phone call made, every TV show watched, every magazine read. All of this -- and more -- would combine with information gleaned from a variety of sources: a GPS transmitter to keep tabs on where that person went, audio-visual sensors to capture what he or she sees or says, and biomedical monitors to keep track of the individual's health. This gigantic amalgamation of personal information could then be used to "trace the 'threads' of an individual's life," to see exactly how a relationship or events developed, according to a briefing from the Defense Advanced Projects Research Agency, LifeLog's sponsor.

Someone with access to the database could "retrieve a specific thread of past transactions, or recall an experience from a few seconds ago or from many years earlier ... by using a search-engine interface.

While the parameters of the project have not yet been determined, Aftergood said he believes LifeLog could go far beyond TIA's scope, adding physical information (like how we feel) and media data (like what we read) to this transactional data. "LifeLog has the potential to become something like 'TIA cubed,'" he said.

Let's not forget Echelon either. What's Echelon? Echelon is an Information Gathering device that the Government has repeatedly denied the existence of yet it is so far reaching in it's scope of power that they haven't been able to keep it under wraps anymore.

"In the greatest surveillance effort ever established, the US National Security Agency (NSA) has created a global spy system, codename ECHELON, which captures and analyzes virtually every phone call, fax, email and telex message sent anywhere in the world. ECHELON is controlled by the NSA and is operated in conjunction with the Government Communications Head Quarters (GCHQ) of England, the Communications Security Establishment (CSE) of Canada, the Australian Defense Security Directorate (DSD), and the General Communications Security Bureau (GCSB) of New Zealand. These organizations are bound together under a secret 1948 agreement, UKUSA, whose terms and text remain under wraps even today.

The ECHELON system is fairly simple in design: position intercept stations all over the world to capture all satellite, microwave, cellular and fiber-optic communications traffic, and then process this information through the massive computer capabilities of the NSA, including advanced voice recognition and optical character recognition (OCR) programs, and look for code words or phrases (known as the ECHELON "Dictionary") that will prompt the computers to flag the message for recording and transcribing for future analysis. Intelligence analysts at each of the respective "listening stations" maintain separate keyword lists for them to analyze any conversation or document flagged by the system, which is then forwarded to the respective intelligence agency headquarters that requested the intercept.

But apart from directing their ears towards terrorists and rogue states, ECHELON is also being used for purposes well outside its original mission. The regular discovery of domestic surveillance targeted at American civilians for reasons of "unpopular" political affiliation or for no probable cause at all in violation of the First, Fourth and Fifth Amendments of the Constitution – are consistently impeded by very elaborate and complex legal arguments and privilege claims by the intelligence agencies and the US government. The guardians and caretakers of our liberties, our duly elected political representatives, give scarce attention to these activities, let alone the abuses that occur under their watch."

Yuck. I've been trying to be really polite and cordial to the NSA everytime I'm on the phone. Unfortunately I can't rock it Beverly Hills Cop style and run outside my apartment and stick a banana in their tailpipe. Oh well.

Finally, Alex Jones reports this from infowars.com:

“Last year a new Army War College report, in 2000, came out and said within 25 years we will all be in a hive mind, that the Pentagon will oversee the insertion of the public into a control grid. That we will all be mounted in our homes, wired into a global government mind-control computer. It actually said this. The Sunday Morning Herald got the federal document. We called and the head scientist, a woman, said how did you learn of this, and freaked out and hung the phone up. These idiots, of course, release this stuff and don't even know what they are up to – or perhaps that was an act, we're not sure.

Three years ago in 2000, the Army War College said the army's main job will be, through peer pressure, convincing the public to take brain chips by 2024, the same year number in the new report last year. They are preparing you for your journey into the real matrix”.

I also don't think it's just a coincidence that the companies actually working towards creating matrix grids for the Pentagon are Sun (Zion) Microsystems and Oracle. Examples like these are popping up all over in a horrifying rapid pace.

There seemed to be a lot of subliminal flash frames being thrown at us during the movie. I definitely caught one during the sex scene, my friend confirmed that he saw it as well. Who knows what's being bombarded at us on a deeper level. The Exorcist had a large amount of satanic imagery and messages in subliminal flash frames. Your subconscious processes this while your conscious mind is not even aware that it's being controlled or spoken to. That frightens me, how about you?

According to the actors and writers who appeared on the Charlie Rose show the movie was about (I'm quoting my bad ass friend Denise who saw it and loves these movies) “the birth of consciousness and choice. You make decisions, there is no real right or wrong, or ‘truth’”. Gotta disagree with that one. This movie was not about choice, it was about no matter what the fuck you do we got you pathetic people on lockdown. How convenient to find out that there is no real “truth”. I'm sure CNN is plastering that one all over their studio.

Far be it for me to assume what the intentions of the Wachowski's are and if they indeed are being manipulated, controlled or are happily part of the Globalist's agenda. It is totally possible that they were told “Here's the movie you're gonna make, say no and you're ruined say yes and watch 30 mil land in your bank account”, truth is stranger than fiction. Watching this movie is like reading the Bible. If you're an initiate of the order you understand the esoteric knowledge that's being passed on and know to not take the Bible literally. If you're not hip to that information you take the Bible literally or purely on the surface and live a life based on myths and symbolism oblivious to the real meanings. Regardless of which one you may be, when you leave the theater of this movie your subconscious will have been profoundly impacted whether you wanted it to be or not. I actually became somewhat depressed for a couple of days after seeing it. Can you imagine if I took a chick to this film and got put in friend zone later that night? I would've been a wreck for weeks. I'm in the Friend Zone Matrix! She's controlling me and I'm helpless! Unplug me from this Nightmare!!! Where's the Fetish chick with the cool black glasses and Fuck-Me-Boots to save me!

We are being conditioned to be submissive to allow our freedoms to be removed in the name of safety. We are being conditioned to accept a complete surveillance society that has everyone micro-chipped for control. We are being conditioned to think that no matter what we do this outcome and future is inevitable. This is not just about a movie, this is about the world we will most definitely live in unless we stop giving our minds away and put an end to it.

I have no thoughts as to how this holy trinity of conditioning will come to a conclusion. If I had it my way I'd have Larry Fishburn reprise his lines at the end of Spike Lee's School Daze where he rings a bell and screams "Wake Up!" at the top of his lungs ending with a pleading look up at the camera, "Please...Wake Up".

Peace,

Issac
